Preeminent construction and commercial litigator, board-certified in Construction Law by The Florida Bar. Trusted ally for legal success in the complex terrain of construction disputes.

Armed with a deep understanding of the construction industry, Erik Neudorff has built his experience for over a decade, focusing on construction and commercial litigation. His skills encompass resolving complex claims, from construction defects and professional negligence to payment disputes and building code compliance. Collaborating with expert witnesses, Erik regularly navigates complicated multimillion-dollar construction defect cases. In resolving legal challenges, he provides a tenacious and strategic approach to representing firm clients.

Erik is a trusted advocate for both local and national corporations, as well as developers, appearing in state and federal courts. His clientele includes contractors, owners, design professionals, condominium associations, suppliers, and insurance carriers. Several high-stakes cases highlight his dedication to delivering effective solutions, including representing a general contractor and developer in a landmark construction defect case—one of the most significant in Palm Beach County's history.

Erik's journey from assisting in managing the construction of a hotel and condominium complex to his position as a sophisticated construction litigator provides a unique blend of practical experience and legal acumen. His hands-on knowledge positions him as an indispensable asset for construction industry members seeking a top-tier advocate.
