Versatile litigator providing powerful representation to clients throughout Florida. Known for depth and capability in the banking and finance, real estate, and government sectors.

Richard Danese represents clients in a wide array of complex commercial litigation, with particular strength in banking and finance, real estate, and government disputes. Through his client-centered approach, he works collaboratively to evaluate all available options and resolve disputes swiftly and efficiently, with business continuity goals and objectives always top of mind. Richard is also certified as a Florida Supreme Court circuit court mediator, with a deep appreciation for artful negotiation and the value of creative solutions.

As part of his expansive portfolio, Richard has helped clients navigate every stage of the litigation process, from the initial discovery through settlement negotiations, trials, and the appeals process. His diverse experience includes challenging cases involving securities, labor and employment, probate, bankruptcy, condominium and landlord-tenant law, defamation, and land use and municipality disputes.

Prior to joining the GrayRobinson team, Richard worked alongside in-house counsel at a global lifestyle brand headquartered in Doral, Florida. He frequently consults with GrayRobinson colleagues from other practices such as taxation, securities, environmental and sustainability law, and real estate and land use, and has developed relationships with experts throughout Florida to provide added depth and perspective for clients.
