Entertainment and Sports

GrayRobinson's entertainment attorneys have established a national reputation for its entertainment and sports practice based on the cornerstone belief that confidentiality is sacred. Actors, athletes, comedians, musicians, models, actors, authors, and entertainment executives routinely trust our seasoned entertainment attorneys for their counsel because we respect our clients' privacy and handle their affairs with the utmost discretion.

The firm's entertainment and sports law practice offers comprehensive legal services for high-profile individuals and businesses, including traditional transactional and contract counseling, negotiating and drafting of agreements in music, film, television, sports, and book publishing. As a full-service firm with diverse areas of practice, GrayRobinson extends its experience to athletes and entertainers by providing legal counsel on asset management, intellectual property, copyright, trust and estate planning, corporate entity formation, real estate transactions and financing.