Utilities

GrayRobinson's utilities lawyers have a long history of representing water, wastewater, solid waste, telecommunications, gas and electric utilities throughout the state of Florida. Our utilities lawyers have represented clients in numerous transactions for the purchase and sale of entire water and wastewater facilities. We have assisted our electric utility clients with power plant permitting and siting issues and have negotiated all manner of agreements associated with the ongoing operation and maintenance of power generation facilities. We have more recently assembled a team to address the needs of the growing number of private power plant developers that must navigate the siting and permitting process in Florida.

Through coordination between the Orlando and Tallahassee offices of GrayRobinson, we are able to offer assistance and counsel to both public and private utilities in the permitting and construction of new facilities as well as the purchase and sale of existing facilities and the associated transfer of permits. We also represent operational utilities in rate cases before the Florida Public Service Commission. GrayRobinson's utilities lawyers strive to offer full-service utilities representation.
